Internal vs. Detached Accessory Dwelling Unit (ADU)

According to Bountiful City code definitions, an accessory dwelling unit is "A self-contained dwelling unit within an owner-occupied single-family residence or in a detached accessory structure located on an owner-occupied property." In 14-14-124 of the code, it states that both a detached and an internal ADU must be located on an owner-occupied property, each qualifying lot can have only one detached or internal ADU and they must be reviewed and considered for approval by Bountiful City staff. However, the difference between a detached or internal ADU is a detached ADU is a conditional use and in addition to being reviewed and considered by Bountiful City staff it also must be reviewed and considered for approval by the Bountiful City Administrative Committee.

Winter Parking in effect November 1

Just a reminder that beginning November 1, there is no overnight parking on Bountiful City streets so our snow plows can effectively do their job!

Also, leaves should be bagged and left on the curb or park strip to be picked up. Remember this is a courtesy pick up until the snow plows need to come out!
