Reconnaissance Level Survey
Bountiful, Utah — Plat A
Research Design, January 2004

Survey Objectives:

The main objective of this Reconnaissance Level Survey is to evaluate the survey area as a potential historic district to be listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The Utah State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) and the Bountiful Historic Commission agree that the survey area may be eligible for the National Register, however the data available from previous surveys conducted in 1986 and 1987 do not accurately represent the current eligibility of the area. Additional objectives of the survey are as follows:

- To update the current database by reevaluating all previously surveyed properties to determine current condition, contributing/non-contributing status, and eligibility for the National Register of Historic Places.
- To conduct a standard survey of all properties within the survey boundaries, especially those which may have attained eligibility within the past twenty years, and non-historic infill properties not included in the previous survey.
- To provide digital photographic documentation of all resources within the area.
- To assist the community in developing preservation programs to such as Main Street revitalization, planning and zoning, and preservation/rehabilitation incentives.
- To serve as a starting point for additional survey work in the city.

Survey Boundaries:

According to the recommendations of the Bountiful Historic Commission and the SHPO, the survey area will be within the boundaries of the city's first plat, known as Plat A. The boundary streets are 400 North, 400 East, 500 South and 200 West. Properties on both sides of the boundary streets will be surveyed. The boundaries of the survey area represent the most logical boundaries of a potential historic district. The Plat A area retains the distinctive pattern of street and block development from the pioneer-era that does not extend beyond the perimeter streets. The survey area has remained the city's historic center despite the pressures of tremendous growth on all sides, especially during the last half of the twentieth century. The survey area contains an eclectic mix of historic residential, commercial and institutional buildings concentrated and juxtaposed in a manner not found in other parts of the city. The map produced by this survey will include all buildings, whether contributing or non-contributing, as well as indicate the preferred boundaries of a potential historic district. The map will be Auto-CAD generated and made available on disk as well as paper. A base map and aerial photographs of the area will be provided by Bountiful City.

Building Types and Materials:

The existing data from the previous surveys conducted in 1986-1987 was made available to the surveyor. According to the data, there are 469 buildings within the survey area. This total number is fairly accurate, but it should be noted there are several buildings in the database have duplicate records. Also, a number of buildings have been constructed in the survey area since the 1980s and are not included on in the database. The data indicates that 232 building are currently eligible for the National Register, which represents 49 percent of the total. However, the database lists over 70 of buildings in the survey area built in the early 1950s and therefore evaluated as out of period in the original survey. It is anticipated that the ratio of contributing to non-contributing will rise as the more recent historic buildings are evaluated.

Ninety-two percent of the buildings are residential, primarily single-family dwellings. Eight percent are from the pioneer era. Eighteen percent are from the Victorian period. Thirty-four percent of residences are bungalows. Another eighteen percent have been classified as period cottages, but a number of these are actually from the World War II period and need to reevaluated using new type and style codes developed by the SHPO. It is anticipated that the post-war housing will add more around sixty residences to the list of eligible housing stock. Brick is the primary building material for residences, but there are also substantial numbers of frame houses, as well as a small, but significant number of houses built from stone. There are only a few outbuildings, other than early garages, that have survived. One residence, the Emily Green House at 206 N. 100 East, has been individually listed on the National Register.

The commercial buildings are concentrated along Main and Center Streets, and represent many different period of development, but the contributing buildings are primarily brick commercial-style blocks built between 1890 and 1920. There are four contributing institution buildings scattered through the survey area. The Bountiful Tabernacle at Main and Center Street is individually listed on the National Register. This survey may find a few commercial and institutional buildings that represent the recent past and have attained eligibility in the past twenty years.

Outline History of Bountiful:

A comprehensive timeline of the city is provided in the book. The City Bountiful, by Leslie T. Foy. The timeline is not reproduced here. Information from the book was combined with the statistical data to outline the following tentative contextual periods, which may be altered according to the final results of this survey:

Early Settlement Period, 1848-1868

The economy of the Early Settlement Period was primary family farming, but there were some early industries such as lumber and gristmills, sugar production, and textiles. Approximately four percent of contributing resources date from this period. These buildings will include both wood and stone, and perhaps some early brick. Though the current data does not list any adobe buildings in the area, a closer examination may find examples incorporated into remodeled residences.

Agriculture, Railroad and Commerce Period, 1869-1891

The railroad had a big impact on the economy of Bountiful. Agricultural production and mercantilism increased. This period will include approximately seventeen percent of contributing buildings. These will include mostly Victorian-era residences and several commercial buildings. The primary material for this period is brick.

Incorporation and City Improvement Period, 1892-1925

The period that followed the city's incorporation represents the transition from rural to urban development. Many amenities were established during in this three-decade period. This period represents the largest number of contributing resources at around thirty-nine percent. This period will include late Victorian-era residences and the city's numerous bungalows. Brick will continue to be the primary building material. This period includes the apex of development on Main Street. Most of the important amenities such as electricity, water, and transportation lines were obtained during this period.

Community Development and the Rise of the Automobile Period, 1926-1945

Approximately twenty-nine percent of contributing resources will come from this period, which marks a change in the economic and social history of the community based on spreading development and the proliferation of the automobile. The period cottage is the most popular house type in the late 1920s and 1930s. Compact World War II-era cottages replace the period cottage by the early 1940s. Commercial buildings change from pedestrian-oriented to automobile-oriented, and the resources of the period represent the change from independent community to part of the greater Salt Lake metropolis.

Post-War Expansion Period, 1946-1957

During this period, the community became more suburban in character. The construction of the freeway system changes the relationship of downtown to the rest of city. Post-war cottages and early ranch houses are used to infill lots in the historic city center. It is anticipated that the remaining contributing resources will come from this period.

Survey Objectives:

The main objective of this Reconnaissance Level Survey as stated in the Research Design was to evaluate the survey area as a potential historic district to be listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The Utah State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) and the Bountiful Historic Commission agreed that the survey area may be eligible for the National Register, however the data available from previous surveys conducted in 1986 and 1987 did not accurately represent the current eligibility of the area. Additional objectives of the survey were as follows:

- To update the current database by reevaluating all previously surveyed properties to determine current condition, contributing/non-contributing status, and eligibility for the National Register of Historic Places.
- To conduct a standard survey of all properties within the survey boundaries, especially those which may have attained eligibility within the past twenty years, and non-historic infill properties not included in the previous survey.
- To provide digital photographic documentation of all resources within the area.
- To assist the community in developing preservation programs to such as Main Street revitalization, planning and zoning, and preservation/rehabilitation incentives.
- To serve as a starting point for additional survey work in the city.

Survey Boundaries:

According to the recommendations of the Bountiful Historic Commission and the SHPO, the survey area was within the boundaries of the city's first plat, known as Plat A. The boundary streets are 400 North, 400 East, 500 South and 200 West. Properties on both sides of the boundary streets were surveyed. The boundaries of the survey area represented the most logical boundaries of a potential historic district. The Plat A area retains the distinctive pattern of street and block development from the pioneer-era that does not extend beyond the perimeter streets. The survey area has remained the city's historic center despite the pressures of tremendous growth on all sides, especially during the last half of the twentieth century. The survey area contains an eclectic mix of historic residential, commercial and institutional buildings concentrated and juxtaposed in a manner not found in other parts of the city. The surveyor noted that the area within the area boundaries had distinct cycles and phases of development that corresponded to Bountiful City's historic growth both within and without the survey area.

Survey Methodology:

This survey followed the standard operating procedures for Reconnaissance Level Survey as defined by the Utah SHPO; however a few deviations in methodology and product were made from the standard RLS techniques used in the past. This survey was conducted as a pilot program for the purposes of evaluating the relatively new technology of digital photography for Reconnaissance Level Surveys. The surveyor used a Canon Digital Rebel digital camera to record the photographs on Compact Flash memory cards. The image files were downloaded and later renamed using the property address. The photographs were printed twelve to a sheet (color laser printout on high-gloss photo-paper) in a format directly corresponding to an edited Microsoft Word version of the database printout pages. The digital photographs were burned onto full-size CD-R disks and provided to the SHPO and the Bountiful Historic Preservation Commission. The map produced by this survey included all buildings, whether contributing or non-contributing, as well as indicate the preferred boundaries of a potential historic district. A base map and aerial photographs of the area were provided by Bountiful City.

Each property was evaluated for age, type, style, materials, height, outbuildings, and National Register of Historic Places eligibility. Properties were evaluated for eligibility using criteria guidelines and designations established by the Utah SHPO. The designations are as follows:

- A — Eligible/Significant: built within the historic period and retains integrity; excellent example of style or type; unaltered or only minor alterations or additions; individually eligible for the National Register for architectural significance; also, buildings of known historical significance.
- B — Eligible: built within the historic period and retains integrity; good example of type or style, but not as well-preserved or well-executed as “A” buildings; more substantial alterations or additions than “A”; eligible for National Register as part of a potential historic district or primarily for historical, rather than architectural reasons. [Additions do not detract and alterations may be reversible].
- C — Ineligible: built during the historic period but has had major alterations or additions; no longer retains integrity. [May still be have important local significance].
- D — Out-of-period: constructed outside the historic period.

The existing data from the previous surveys conducted in 1986-1987 was made available to the surveyor. The previous data included 469 records for primary buildings in the survey area. During the survey, the data was found to be inaccurate and incomplete. There were a high number of duplicate records, mostly for buildings, which had some previous General File or Intensive Level research. Many records had estimated addresses that could not be linked to existing buildings. When the surveyor could determine the buildings had been demolished, the evaluation status was changed to X (demolished). Erroneous addresses were marked U (undetermined) in the status field. Two buildings, the Emily Green House at 206 North 100 East and the Bountiful Tabernacle at 55 South Main Street (address on file Main and Center Streets) were individually listed on the National Register of Historic Places prior to the survey.

Survey Findings:

The Bountiful Plat A Reconnaissance Level Survey documented a total of 886 primary buildings and other resources. The total includes two buildings (one contributing and one non-contributing) demolished after the commencement of the survey and 58 previously demolished historic buildings. Of the 826 extant primary resources, 517 (62 percent) contribute to the historic character of the Plat A area. This amount includes 168 resources (20 percent) designated as A meaning eligible/significant, and 349 resources (42 percent) designated as B meaning eligible/contributing. Of the remaining 309 resources (37 percent) are non-contributing. This includes 100 (12 percent) C resources (altered historic buildings) and 209 (25 percent) D out-of-period buildings. Ninety-one percent of contributing buildings are residential. A statistical summary of the survey data for contributing buildings appears in Appendix B.

Findings by Contextual Period:

Early Settlement Period, 1848-1868

The settlement of Bountiful began with the family of Perrigrine Sessions, who brought a herd of 300 cattle to the area on September 27, 1847, approximately two months after members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (LDS or Mormon Church) entered the Salt Lake Valley. In March 1848, the herd was given up so the Sessions and five other families could begin farming. Within a few years, dozens of new families established farmsteads in the area. In 1849, a saw mill and a log schoolhouse were constructed. Three years later a public building was built for school, church and socials. The first families lived in wagon boxes, tents, or crude dugouts. Log cabins were the first semi-permanent dwellings. The only surviving log cabin in the survey area from this period is the Willey Cabin, which was renovated and moved to the Bountiful City Park in 1992.

The settlement of loosely scattered farmsteads was named Bountiful on February 27, 1855, just after the established of road districts (1853), a post office (1854), and the first town site survey (1854). Prior to this time the families were scattered throughout the area currently known as Bountiful, Centerville and Woods Cross. The boundaries of the first town site, known as Plat A, encompassed the area designated for the Bountiful Fort. Based on past models of Mormon town planning, it was believed that the community's social, cultural and educational development would be better served by concentrating the residences within the town site with farming in the outlying acreage. The fortified town would also provide protection from the perceived threat of Native Americans, who had previously used the land for hunting and camping.

The fort wall was designed as a dirt embankment along the Plat A boundary streets: 200 West, 400 North, 400 East and 500 South. It was only partially completed and eventually demolished by 1900. The settlers were advised to move into the fortified city and lots were sold for $5.00 to $25.00 per lot. Of the 150 families living in Bountiful in 1855, only 36 had built homes inside the fort. The families were closely tied to Salt Lake City and the greater community through dirt roads, the Pony Express (1860) and the Desert Telegraph (1867). The dedication of the Bountiful Tabernacle on March 13, 1863, was an impressive two-day event, which brought many visitors to the community.

The settlement-period homes were constructed of log, adobe, and stone. The log cabins were temporary and either demolished or used for outbuildings. Several adobe houses have survived, but most all difficult to identify because of stucco and other alterations. There is a high possibility that more in-depth research may identify early adobe (and possibly log) buildings as portions of enlarged or altered buildings in the survey area. Besides the Bountiful Tabernacle, the survey identified only four buildings which used adobe construction. Built in the 1860s, the house at 269 E. 200 North, has classical symmetry and simple ornamentation such as a dentilated cornice and Greek Revival returns. Similar details are also found on the few early stone houses, most are built of random rubble. The Willey home at 415 N. 200 West, built in 1898, is a well-preserved early example. No extant commercial or institutional buildings from this period were identified. The Daniel Carter stone barn, a recently renovated circa 1850s building at 299 N. 200 West, was the only settlement outbuilding identified by the survey.

Agriculture, Railroad and Commerce Period, 1869-1891

The coming of the railroad to Utah in 1869 had a tremendous impact on the economy of the settlement, especially within the survey area. Agricultural production and mercantilism increased, and the economy diversified. The number of families within the fort boundaries quadrupled. The community added numerous amenities: Utah Central Railroad (1870), Bliss Hall (first Protestant church-1872), three LDS wards were formed (1877), telephone service (1883), People's Opera House and Mercantile Company (1891). The Main Street commercial business district began to take shape during this period. Numerous stately residences were built at the prominent corner lots of the town site. The first immigrants to arrive by train were the family of Jacob Gierisch, which marks the end of the settlement period.

Approximately ten percent of contributing buildings identified in this survey were constructed during this period, but historic sources suggest the original number was much greater considering a high number of buildings from this period were subsequently demolished. The majority of buildings from this period are residential with a handful of commercial and institutional examples. Many of the homes are similar to those built in the previous period with a high number of stone examples. The Holbrook home at 105 N. 100 East, built in 1869, is a classical-styled house constructed of random fieldstone. There are several comparable homes in the survey area. By the 1870s, fired brick was commonly available and became the material of choice. Just one block north of the Holbrook home is the Stoker home at 205 N. 100 East. This residence, built in 1875, is one of the earliest surviving brick homes in Bountiful. It features a symmetrical façade and dentilated cornice returns with a slightly later rear wing addition. There are several good examples of early brick houses from this period. Some have been covered in stucco, but most have exposed brick. During this period, the Victorian style became popular. The National Register-listed Emily Green house, built in 1887, is an unusual example (early brick foursquare with Victorian ornamentation), while the house at 145 S. 200 East is a more typical Victorian cross-wing cottage. Frames houses from this period, which have not been altered, are rare. The McDuff house at 253 S. 200 East is a small frame example built around 1880.

The few surviving commercial and institutional buildings from the period vary in type, style and material. Most of the historic commercial buildings were on Main Street and were demolished or altered. One extant example is the Lewis Hotel & Saloon at 206 N. Main, a brick two-part block, built circa 1890). Most institutional buildings were also replaced. Two surviving examples include the Bountiful Tabernacle (adobe & brick, 1863) and Bliss Hall (stone, altered, built circa 1872). Several granaries and smokehouses (all brick) associated with houses of the period were noted in the survey.

Incorporation and City Improvement Period, 1892-1925

The period that followed the city's incorporation represents the transition from rural to urban development. The City of Bountiful was incorporated on December 28, 1892. Three years later, mainly because of disputes over water rights, the communities of West Bountiful and Wood Cross broke away from Bountiful. In the years that followed, the city's early amenities were concentrated on the Plat A town site and the adjacent neighborhoods. The Incorporation and City Improvement Period was a time of civic firsts: newspaper (1902), electric power (1896), walkways (1897), public watering trough (1898), library (1900), electric streetcar (1900), telephone exchange (1903), water system and plumbing (1906-1907), streetlights (1908), sidewalks (1909-1914), fire department (1911), paved streets (1918), bus line (1920), and city dump (1922). The population of the city doubled in the period.

This period represents a large number of contributing resources at around twenty-four percent. This period includes late Victorian-era residences and numerous bungalows. Brick was the primary building material. This period includes the apex of historic development on Main Street, and despite recent demolitions, several brick commercial blocks remain to represent the period. Two LDS meetinghouses and the historic Stoker school were built during this period. There are numerous contributing outbuilding, mostly frame garages, from this period.

Community Development and the Rise of the Automobile Period, 1926-1945

Approximately twenty-nine percent of contributing resources are from this period, which marks a change in the economic and social history of the community based on spreading development and the proliferation of the automobile. Commercial buildings change from pedestrian-oriented to automobile-oriented, and the resources of the period represent the change from independent community to part of the greater Salt Lake metropolis. The first stop signs were installed on Bountiful streets in 1928. The period cottage is the most popular house type in the late 1920s and 1930s, and rivaled the number of bungalows in the previous period, which is unusual in Utah. Compact World War II-era cottages replaced the period cottage by the early 1940s. Within the Plat A area, homes from this period appear as infill between the pioneer and Victorian era homes.

Despite the depression years, Bountiful's Main Street appears to have experienced a building boom period during the 1930s. Several good example of brick commercial blocks, such as Bountiful Music at 365 N. Main Street, date from this period. This type of 1930s-boom is unusual for towns of Bountiful's size, and is probably due the strong economic ties between Bountiful and Salt Lake in the 1930s.

Post-War Expansion Period, 1946-1960

As anticipated, the ratio of contributing to non-contributing was higher with the reevaluation of numerous buildings from the 1950s. Thirty-three percent of contributing buildings were constructed during this period. The community became more suburban in character, as Bountiful was part of the post World War II boom that took place around the greater Salt Lake metropolis area. The construction of the freeway system changes the relationship of downtown to the rest of city. Post-war cottages and early ranch houses completed the infill of lots in the historic city center. In many cases, particularly at the east edge of the survey area, showcase ranch houses were built on the corner lots formerly occupied by nineteenth-century farmhouses. It appears that within the historic downtown, many residents were building homes similar to those in the subdivisions rapidly appearing along Bountiful's foothills. As in the previous period, there are numerous associated garages.

Bountiful's commercial district experienced a second boom during this period. There are numerous examples of late 1950s and early 1960s commercial buildings. The Bountiful Community Church at 100 N. 400 East, built in 1954 and expanded in 1961, is a notable institutional building of the period.

Recommendations:

Historic District Recommendations

This survey recommends that Bountiful consider both a National Register Historic District nomination for the Plat A area and a Multiple Property Nomination for the rest of the city. It is clear that there are many historic resources not in the Plat A boundaries that could benefit from a Multiple Property treatment for the entire community. Multiple property documentation would also provide a good contextual foundation for the evaluation of the city's numerous post-war housing developments, which have only recently become eligible for the National Register.

The Plat A area is a good candidate for a historic district nomination, although the surveyor would recommend altering the survey boundaries along the district to exclude large portions of newer commercial development (e.g. 200 West and 500 South). Although the ratio of contributing is slightly low at 62 percent, there are several compelling arguments to be made for a historic district:

1. The Plat A grid-iron street development is intact and differs from any of the surrounding areas.
2. Plat A includes a high concentration of nineteenth-century residences, which are well-preserved and display a high degree of artisanship (particularly in stone masonry).
3. The potential district has a wide range of historic resources from settlement dwellings to high-end ranch houses. It represents a strong approximate thirty-year cycle of development (peculiar to Bountiful) that begins in the 1860s and has continued through today.
4. The district has been recognized throughout its over one-hundred-fifty-year history as the civic, commercial and cultural center of the community.

The Bountiful History Commission is currently working toward designation of this historic district. This past spring the city council recognized the area as a historic district to be known as the Bountiful Fort Historic District. Signs have been recently placed to designate the district boundaries. Intensive Level Surveys (ILS) are currently being performed on eleven twentieth-century buildings within the potential district to help develop context for the area. Two other buildings outside of the survey area were also selected for ILS work. The thirteen buildings are:

- 275 East 200 South, circa 1900-1937
- 73 West 100 North, circa 1903
- 94 North 100 East, circa 1917
- 197 East 500 South, circa 1917
- 190 South Main Street, circa 1919
- 195 North Main Street, circa 1930
- 390 South 100 East, circa 1931
- 49 West 300 North, circa 1939
- 355 North 400 East, circa 1947
- 115 East 200 South, circa 1955
- 55 East 300 South, circa 1959
- 676 East 500 South, circa 1914 (not in Plat A area)
- 390 North and 1000 East, circa 1910 (not in Plat A area)

Further survey work

This survey should be start of a series of surveys for the city. Previous surveys performed in the 1980s were selective and evaluated only historic buildings along the main arterial roads (e.g. Main Street, 200 West, 400 East, Orchard Drive, etc.). This data needs to be updated and expanded. There are three options for further survey work. The first, probably the most effective and expensive, would be to use the Plat A survey as a base for divided the city into quadrants. Because Bountiful has so many residences from the post-war era at the base of the foothills, it is recommended to start at the north or east quadrants and work clockwise through the city. The second option is to perform standard surveys along the arterials. Outside of the proposed historic district, the highest concentration of historic homes is found along the arterial roads mention above and it is possible the proposed historic district at the city's core could be expanded to include those neighborhoods. The third option would be to map out subdivision development (with plat boundaries and dates) to pinpoint potential districts of eligible post-war housing. For example, two good candidates would be the circa 1940s subdivision north of the Bountiful Junior High, or the 1950s development east of 400 East. Other areas, for example, west of Plat A where there has been a lot of recent commercial development or the high east bench could be conducted as selective surveys. The twentieth-century transformation of Bountiful from a series of orchards and farms loosely linked by a commercial core to a suburban bedroom community can best be told by understanding the development that surrounds the Plat A historic center.

At the request of the Bountiful Historic Commission, the surveyor compiled a list of historic properties in the neighborhoods bordering the historic district. The adjacent neighborhoods would be the best place to start further RLS work and these individual properties are possible candidates for future ILS work. In the outlying neighborhoods, the “A” properties as identified in the SHPO database on the past surveys could also be considered for ILS work or for individual National Register nominations. The Bountiful dwellings book is also a resource for potential individual nominations. The following properties are within six blocks of the potential historic district, but were not included in the Bountiful dwellings book:
